

QUEENLINE

BEDROOMS & KITCHENS

28th March 2007

Kitchen companies often present an example of a kitchen layout, showing alternative costs for the design shown. Usually they show a rather small kitchen area and only include for the basics. I wanted to design a "typical" kitchen, the type that we install week after week. Yes, we do smaller and larger designs, but size-wise, I feel that this layout is representative of 80% of kitchens that we design.

Also, I wanted to allow for a fully inclusive costing. To this end, I haven't skimped on the specification, i.e. PVC edged tops, allowing unusual shapes, panniers and drawers, laminate backboards on the walls, a large bar area. All these items have increased costs but they are design features that most people want to incorporate.

The furniture costed for is not just a mass produced "flat pack" kitchen. It is a Custom made, rigid German kitchen. This manufacturer offers you an unbelievable choice of styles and colours, with special sized units available, allowing complete freedom in design.

I hope this helps to give you an idea of the likely costs involved with a Queenline kitchen. I know that we are not the cheapest company around but for the last 34 years I have been offering kitchens at the top end of the quality market for realistic costs. This approach appears to work very well as 85% of our enquiries now come from recommendations and referrals.

If you are interested in having me design your kitchen, please ring 01204 307191, or come into the studio to see me. The design service is free of charge and you can take the plans, visuals and costs home with you.

Looking forward to seeing you soon,

Robin.
